Word from official quarters at Washington is to the effect that the national administration, thru relief agencies set up by President Hoover, will, within one month, have an accurate line on the unemployment situation and will have the machinery ready to prevent undue suffering thru unemployment during the coming winter. The administration is proceeding on the theory that it will have to be ready to meet conditions in which there is no improvement. This is a wise procedure. Precautions should be taken to meet the worst situation that can be reasonably expected to develop. Then if the picture brightens this fall, all the better.

Newspapers over the country are already beginning to talk about the shadow of the dole, which has been cast upon the country. It is now expected that all sorts of bills, providing for the dole in various disguised forms, will be brought forward at the next session of congress, in an effort to shift the responsibility of caring for the unfortunate, from the local communities to the federal government. It is this dole danger which the national administration is determined to check if it is at all possible.

And surely there is abundant precedent for making this determination. The experiences of Germany and Great Britain with the dole ought to be enough proof for anyone, as to what might happen if the institution were fastened on the United States. The financial and economic situation in Germany needs no explication. Everyone who has read the newspapers during the past few months is familiar with it. And the situation in Great Britain is none too satisfactory. According to the latest advices from London there is a deficit in the British budget of $600,000,000. Desperate efforts are to be made to balance the budget and it is significant that one means counted on to do this is a reduction of the dole. Just whether this can be reduced now, after so many years, without serious trouble remains to be seen. Certain it is that the dole system has been a bitter experience for both Germany and Great Britain.

Just what might happen to the United States if the federal dole were ever fastened upon us may be gathered from the recent experience of the city of Detroit with its dole. There have been charges of graft, misuse of funds, the paying of the dole to those not legally entitled to it, including some who did not live in Detroit, and certainly the finances of the city have been disrupted by its experiences with the municipal dole. Putting such a system into effect on a national scale would increase the opportunities for graft, political wire pulling, and so on down the line.

It is not to be expected, of course, that those who favor the dole system in the United

BONDON CAR IS STOLEN, RECOVERED
YESTERDAY

When Mr. and Mrs. J. Bondon came out of the KQW studio in San Jose last Friday evening they found themselves afoot, their car having been "borrowed" for the week-end. The missing car, an Essex sedan, was recovered Monday morning, when it was found in the outskirts of San Jose.

The gas tank was dry, the generator was broken, and the tires were gone, but insurance covered the damage.

States, will start with proposals for an out and out dole. They are far too clever for that, and will first of course propose innocent looking measures involving the federal treasury in the unemployment situation. But the trouble is, that once the door of the federal treasury is open, there will be no way of closing it, in this land of political opportunities. In Great Britain and Germany the dole system started harmlessly enough with various kinds of government unemployment insurance. But year by year the demands on the federal treasury continued until now both countries have the out and out dole and altho facing dire economic troubles, have no way of lessening the dole burden.

The Philadelphia Public Ledger recently emphasized the danger in the United States, in commenting on a statement made by Senator

SEPT. DOLLAR DAY
MONTH ON ESPEE,
SAYS LOCAL AGENT

A record-breaking holiday traffic movement for California in the first two weeks of next month was virtually assured today by announcement of the Southern Pacific company of another widespread "dollar day" sale of cent-a-mile transportation will be carried out on Sept. 3, 4 and 5.

Plans for the "sale" were made public here by C. T. Tanner, agent for the company, who pointed out that the bargain offering of train rides will just precede Labor Day week-end, closely followed by Admission Day.

With a 12-day return limit from the first date of sale, Mr. Tanner declared, the low fare round trip excursions will also provide transportation for the better part of a two weeks' trip at the start of the autumn vacation season.

Dates of the attractive railroad offer, it was emphasized, coincide with the two crowning events of California's 1931 fiesta year—the Los Angeles fiesta, Sept. 4 to 13, and the state fair at Sacramento, Sept. 5 to 12. Attendance at both celebrations is expected to mirror results of the cent-a-mile traffic.

The forthcoming excursions, first of their kind since last May, have been authorized over the entire Pacific lines of the railroad, serving six western states, Mr. Tanner announced. As before, the bargain tickets will be accepted on all trains, both coach and Pullman, operated by the company between San Francisco and Ogden, including Salt Lake City, and between Portland and El Paso.

Based on three-fifths of the normal one-way fare, the roundtrip "dollar day" transportation, for example, from this city to Los Angeles will cost only $9.35, it was stated, while the journey to Sacramento.

Why Old
Customers Return

It is natural that an institution which takes the lead in a progressive but conservative measure should lose a few of its valued customers. Others come to take their place.

It is, however, a significant fact that a large number of these old customers have returned to San Jose Pacific. Steadily and surely many who were once tempted by a higher yield elsewhere are coming back.

These customers have decided that, after all, old friends and time-tested policies are best. They prefer the conservative 5% saving plan of this pioneer institution and the more desirable security which this yield permits.

Cuban Revolution Collapsing After Bloody Battle at Gibara—Oil Wells of East Texas Are Closed Down.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

Gen. Menocal.

WHEN Gen. Mario Menocal and Col. Carlos Mendieta were captured by the Cuban government troops and locked up in Cabanas fortress, it appeared to observers on the island that the revolution had collapsed. Indeed, President Machado started off the week with the announcement that the revolt was over, that the rebels were surrendering everywhere and that there would be peace throughout Cuba within a few days. The most important of the remaining leaders were said to be in Santa Clara province with rather small bands of followers. Aviators were sent out to fly over rebel territory dropping leaflets announcing that Machado would grant amnesty to all who surrendered immediately. But the revolutionists had not yet reached the end of their resources. A filibustering expedition landed men from half a dozen countries and quantities of arms and ammunition at Gibara, near the eastern end of the island, and that port was captured and fortified. The government immediately moved against this force, and there followed one of the bloodiest battles ever fought in Cuba. The gunboat Patria destroyed the Gibara fortress and a land army inflicted a crushing defeat on the rebel troops and the filibusters. Meanwhile planes dropped bombs on the town, which was badly shattered. It was reported that about 500 revolutionists were killed and that the federal casualties were heavy.

Lifting of the censorship revealed that the rebels also had suffered severely in the fierce engagements in Santa Clara province. Despite these defeats the revolutionary leaders still at large were insistent that their cause was not lost. General Menocal managed to smuggle out of his cell a proclamation urging his followers to continue the struggle, and there were indications that Machado's troubles were not over by any means. In Washington, though the State department would make no comment on the situation, it was the general opinion of officials that the only way that Machado can prevent renewed uprisings is to enact speedily the reforms along democratic lines that his administration promised. Certainly the American government hopes he will adopt this course, for it has no desire to intervene in the affairs of the island republic and will not do so unless developments bring on a state of virtual anarchy.

TEXAS has taken its stand beside Oklahoma in the fight against ruinous low prices for crude oil, and it was expected that Kansas also would adopt measures for curtailment of production. The net result, it was believed, would be higher prices for midcontinent crude oil and possibly the stabilization of the American oil industry.

Following action by the legislature, Gov. Ross S. Sterling ordered the complete shutdown of the 1,600 producing oil and gas wells of the great east Texas area, and then sent about a thousand National Guardsmen into four counties to enforce the order, martial law being proclaimed. No resistance was met, the larger companies closing their wells before the soldiers arrived.

Governor Sterling, himself an oil man, predicted higher crude prices and estimated the Texas and Oklahoma shutdowns would take about one million barrels a day off the market. He said martial law in east Texas will not be lifted until the state railroad commission has issued prorations orders.

Governor Murray of Oklahoma, who originated the idea of dealing with overproduction by declaring martial law, sent a message of congratulation to the Texas executive.

Most of the operators in the oil regions planned to care for employees during the shut down period. Drilling was continued as usual, for there was no ban on bringing in new wells provided they were shut down immediately.

POLITICAL observers in Illinois saw, in the latest episode of the Frank L. Smith case, indications that the man who was elected to the United States senate from Illinois and was twice denied a seat in the upper house because of Samuel Insull's contributions to his campaign fund, might seek again to represent his state in the senate. What has happened is that Mr. Smith has made public the fact that Julius Rosenwald, Chicago financier, between the primary and the election of 1926, offered him stock in Sears, Roebuck & Co., then worth $555,000, to withdraw from the Republican nomination. Mr. Rosenwald is too ill to be interviewed, but his intimate friends admit the truth of the story and uphold the purity of the financier's motives in thus seeking harmony within the Republican party.

Mr. Smith, at his residence in Dwight said: "I did not issue the statement for political purposes. If I had intended to use it for such, I would have used it in my two campaigns for the senate and again last year. I issued it because others saw fit to write a book about the case and because they did not give the people all the facts."

"As to my future action politically, I shall be governed by conditions." If Smith should file for the senatorship nomination, he will have Senator Glenn as his opponent in the Republican primaries. He was defeated for renomination in 1927 by Glenn in the upheaval which also retired Governor Small.

THERE cannot be any general revival of prosperity until the nations of Europe settle their political disputes and the German reparations have been revised. Such is the opinion of the Wiggan committee of international bankers at Basel, which was appointed to study Germany's financial needs and capabilities. The German government was greatly encouraged by the report, and one of its officials said that a new conference on finances, politics and reparations must be called immediately and that all Europe hoped it would be called by President Hoover.

RECURRING reports that President Hoover would call a special session of congress to deal with the unemployment situation were declared at the White House to be without foundation. The President feels, too, that it is unnecessary to call congress earlier than December to organize in time to consider the reparations-war debt plan. He believes this can be handled in the regular session.

The President appointed Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telegraph and Telephone company, head of a national organization which will be charged with the task of mobilizing national, state and local relief agencies of every kind in meeting the unemployment crisis during the coming winter.

Jouett Shouse, executive chairman of the Democratic national committee, came out with a statement demanding of President Hoover more positive action and less theoretical investigation. He asserted that the President is spending more time ascertaining how many persons will be out of work next winter than he is in taking measures for their relief.

R. T. O'Neil.

DR. HENRY Pritchett, president emeritus of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, in the annual report of the foundation makes the bold assertion that the leaders of the American Legion "intend to raid the treasury of the United States." And he questions the patriotism of war veterans who ask pensions or bonuses when unemployed. Under the subheading "Patriotism, Pensions and Politics," Doctor Pritchett says:

"There has come about in our country a complex patriotism, bonus seeking, and politics the like of which can be found in no other nation on earth. Organizations that started in pure patriotism have lent themselves to pension lobbying on such a form as to demoralize both veterans and congress."

"Erroneous and unfair" is what Ralph T. O'Neil, national commander of the American Legion, says of the Pritchett statement, adding: "The American Legion never has in the past or, in my opinion, never will in the future, ask anything that is unfair or that will place an unjust financial burden on the country."

He says the real objective of the veterans' organization has been to get disability compensation, but that it never has asked a pension for able-bodied men.

FROM a preliminary treasury statement is derived the unpleasant information that the government suffered a drop of more than $600,000,000 in internal revenue collections during the fiscal year 1931, the first full year during which taxes were affected by the economic depression and the falling stock market. Total collections for that year were $2,428,223,700. Income taxes yielded $1,830,040,400, a decline of $550,000,000, while miscellaneous internal revenue accounted for collections of $598,183,300, a drop of $61,698,246.

Corporation income taxes netted the government $1,026,292,690, a decline of $237,021,700 and individual taxes $833,647,700, a decrease of $313,196,900, reflecting the depressed conditions in the business world and the wide variations of collections in times of prosperity and in times of depression.

While both corporations and individual income taxes were cutting a deep swath in government revenues, miscellaneous taxes showed only a small loss despite the business slump.

QUITE RECENTLY

Rafael Largo y Herrera, noted Peruvian political leader and former minister of foreign affairs, arrived from Lima by airplane. He has now been nominated for the presidency of Peru by the Economist party, and it is said stands an excellent chance of being elected. So Senator Largo started back home the other day to participate in the elections, and again he traveled by the air route. He thus was the first passenger to make a round trip by plane between Peru and New York.

During his brief visit to this country he spent a day or so in Washington, where he has many friends and admirers.

Rafael Largo.

JOHN E. BAKER, American relief expert and adviser to the Chinese railway ministry, sends word that the flood in the Yangtze valley is China's most terrible disaster in the present century. About thirty million people have lost their homes and a third of them are destitute. The loss of life, already terrific, was increased when a great dike protecting part of Hankow gave way and several hundred persons were drowned. Typhoid, cholera and dysentery are epidemic, and industry is paralyzed. All foreigners were reported safe.

The Chinese government has made an offer to the federal farm board for part of its surplus wheat to help feed the refugees, and the idea is favorably considered by officials at Washington.

M. Waldemar.

ONCE mighty but now fallen like many another, Prof. Augustinas Waldemar, former dictator of Lithuania, was put on trial before a court martial at Kaunas on charges of plotting a revolt a year ago to overthrow the present joint dictatorship of President Anthony Smetona and Premier Jonas Tubellus. Twenty-four of his followers were his fellow defendants. The plot was betrayed to the authorities by several of Waldemar's adherents, all members of the Iron Wolf organization, and it was expected that their testimony would result in severe sentences for those accused. Professor Waldemar, who returned to Kaunas from his place of exile near Memel to attend the trial, said the charges were exaggerated, which sounds like a weak defense. There won't be any sympathy for him in Poland, for when he was in power he was the bitter foe of that country and of its dictator, Marshal Pilsudski.

DEVELOPMENTS in the New York legislative investigation of the administration of New York city may bring about a political feud between Governor Roosevelt and Tammany Hall that would have a decided effect on the governor's chances for the Democratic Presidential nomination. Some of his friends believe a break with Tammany might help rather than hinder his cause in that matter and would bring him support from other states where the leading Democrats have been holding aloof from the Roosevelt boom because of fear that he was too closely allied with Tammany. These friends think that even if Tammany should turn hostile, Roosevelt could carry New York state against Mr. Hoover unless there should be a great improvement in the economic situation within a year.

Leading members of Tammany would not discuss for publication their attitude toward Roosevelt because the Tammany policy apparently is to avoid an open break with the governor so long as he has the state patronage at his disposal and remains a decided Presidential possibility.

GOING back to Illinois for a moment: Newton Jenkins of Chicago has announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for United States senator on a platform of opposition to the renomination of President Hoover. Mr. Jenkins, who is forty-four years old, an ex-service man and a lawyer, has twice before been a candidate for senator.

CURRENT COMMENT

Hebert of Rhode Island: "Senator Hebert of Rhode Island, who has been studying the subject of unemployment insurance abroad, preparatory to hearings before a special Senate committee, sees the fearsome shadow of the dole should the system be imported to this country. That is, of course, the danger as England's experience has shown. There was no thought of the dole when unemployment insurance, with contributions from employers, employees and the government, was instituted. In England Mr. Hebert found that in addition to other evils the system had become permeated with politics, so much so that persons with a 'pull' receive special privileges. This is a point which hitherto has not been emphasized."

The way to avoid the danger is not to take the first step toward the dole system.

One Dose German Remedy Ends Gas

"I was sick and nervous with indigestion and stomach gas. One dose of Adlerika helped. I eat anything now and sleep good." Henry Dodd.

You can't get rid of indigestion or gas by just doctoring the stomach. For gas stays in the UPPER bowel. Adlerika reaches BOTH upper and lower bowel, washing out poisons which cause gas, nervousness and bad sleep. Get Adlerika today; by tomorrow you feel the wonderful effect of this German Doctor's remedy. — Shadle's Drug Store. Advt.

SUCCESS IN SAVING DEPENDS ON ACTION . . .

Everybody knows the wisdom and the value of saving money.

The trouble with most of us is that we promise ourselves that we will save in the future.

We have good intentions but put off action until we have spent our money for other things.

But mere wishing and hoping are not enough. We must act.

The all important thing is to begin. Start a savings account today.
